

Hitachi has been chosen to provide interactive whiteboards for La Joya Community High School

The school is deploying the Hitachi FXDUO-77 model StarBoards, along with the award-winning Hitachi CP-A100 3LCD ultra-short-throw projector, as part of the Hitachi Ultra Short Throw Bundle. Furthermore, advanced placement biology students are using the StarBoards as a tool to help facilitate their final exam presentations.

OPPORTUNITY

Provide school with an all in one solution that is easily deployable and creates an educational environment that is hands on.

HITACHI SOLUTION

The Ultra Show Throw Bundle, which includes the StarBoard FXDUO interactive whiteboard with the ultra short throw CP-A100 3LCD projector.

RESULT

Hitachi technology has provided a learning tool that allows students to take ownership of their educational experience.

"As a district, we chose the Hitachi StarBoard for the service and training support we received, along with competitive pricing."

– David Sanders, IT Director, Tolleson High School District

Mike Grace, advanced placement biology teacher at La Joya Community High School, explained the program he developed for his students to fully maximize their interactive learning experience. "Instead of giving the class a traditional written final, I decided to split them into groups for final presentations on specific topics using the StarBoard."

The presentations on various biology topics were meant to display not only the student's knowledge of science, but also their competency with using all the features of the StarBoard. "Students were expected to give up to a 15 minute presentation on their topic that would demonstrate the StarBoard Software, use of video, and links to educational sites online," added Grace.

"This was a great way for students to really learn and engage with the technology. Additionally, taking the next step and having our older students train our younger students is far more effective because the kids understand the technology better than anyone," stated Grace.
